

Detroit Literacy Project Virtual Library

The Detroit Literacy Project is a collaboration of teaching and learning institutions united to improve and increase literacy rates for citizens in the city of Detroit specifically, and the surrounding metropolitan areas. These resources are free to anyone with a device that connects to the internet. From early learners through adults, this list of websites provides access to diverse content for children and families.

The Detroit Literacy Project is led by Jennifer Gustafson, Professor of Library Sciences at Wayne State University in partnership with the following: DPSCD - Detroit Public Schools Community District, Northville Public Schools Librarians, Charles H. Wright Museum, Detroit Historical Museum, Wayne RESA, MEC – Michigan Education Corps, Soar Detroit, Detroit Institute of Arts, Detroit Association of Black Storytellers, Detroit Public Library, Michigan Legislature, Pro Literacy Detroit and Wayne State University.
